A very large number of Georgetown men have entered the military serv-ice; while it is possible that the total registration of the law school for this year will not be quite as large as that of the past five years, when it has been over 1,000, present indications point to an enrollment which will compare favorably with that of previous sessions.

Holds Exclusive Right to Teach Isaac Pitman

For the first time in the history of business institutions in Washington students have been given the opportunity to study the Isaac Pitman sys-tem of shorthand. This system is taguht in the schools of over sixty office in the United States and is used by more reporters and high-class stenographers than any other shorthand in the English speaking world. For ten years writers of Issac Pitman shorthand have held the world's records in speed and accuracy, and the present record of 278 words a minute is educational advantages, the manage ment has secured the exclusive right to teach Isaac Pitman shorthand in the District of Columbia. The re-sults obtained during the last year extific text books and finely engraved shorthand exercises available to the students make the presentation of the subject very simple, while the large number of literary works in engraved shorthand accessible to the students gives them an opportunity not only to become well grounded in the principles of shorthand but to broaden their gen eral education by reading. There are

The combination system now employed in the National University Law School enables the student to se cure the benefit of the text-book an classroom instruction, and then with another set of instructors to take up the leading cases which illustrate and clarify the general principles. The problem of correct methods of in-struction in Washington is compli-cated by the fact that the student body of many of the schools, and n tably of the National University Law school, is composed of civil service employes and others who are not able to devote their whole time to the study of law. The problem which the National Law School has sought to meet was to so arrange its courses, its hours and its methods of instructions at give the best results possition as to give the best results poss ble to those who had only a certain number of hours which could be de-voted to classroom instruction and home study.

The National University Law School will reopen its doors for its forty-ninth annual session on October 1 next. The old school building on Thirteenth street, between New York avenue and I street, has become one of the landmarks of the city and in its halls have been heard many of the most distinguished judges and mem-bers of the bar in the District during the long period which has elapsed since the civil war. The university was first organized in 1892, and later was reorganized under special act o was reorganized under special act of Congress in 1896. Among the dis-tinguished jurists who have held a place upon the faculty are to be found the names of Associate Justice Samuel Miller, of the Supreme Court Samuel Miller, of the Supreme Court of the United States, who here delivered the lectures which were afterward published as Miller on the Constitution; the Hon. John Goode, of Virginia, formerly Solicitor General of the United States; Walter D. Davidge, Esq., the leader of the District of Columbia bar; H. O. Claughton, of the Virginia bar; Hon. James Schouler of Boston, the eminent Schouler, of Boston, the eminent juridical writer: Chief Justice Alvey, of the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and for many years Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District the Supreme Court of the District who have served or who are now serving upon the faculty were Justice Arthur McArthur, Charles C. Cole, Justice Job Barnard, Justice Anderson and Justice Frederick L. Siddons.

John W. Davis, solicitor general of the United States, and Hon. Walter I. McCoy, associate justice. Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, have delivered this address in the past three years. At the session on Tuesday, Dean Hamilton will announce the new courses, changes in the faculty and other modifications of the curriculum. Special emphasis will be laid on the work of the graduate course this year. This course is open only to graduates of approved three-year law schools and leads to the degree' of Master of Laws. The course affords an opportunity for genuine graduate work in law, under the direction of professors each one of whom is a specialist in his subject.

In several courses the textbook esting features of the law school work for the coming year will be the contest between the two debating so-cleties which will be organized by members of the faculty. It is also expected that from time to time during the school year interesting lec-tures upon matters of national im-portance will be delivered by men prominent in public life. The Greek letter fraternity, the parent chapter of which is in the National Univers-ity Law School and which now has a number of chapters in prominent law schools throughout the country has recently organized an chapter which has a large and in-fluential membership. "EFFICIENCY TYPEWRITING" and the "SILENT SMITH"

In selecting a school for your boys or girls or for yourself you will, of course, select the one which offers the most efficient course.

No better criterion of a school's efficiency may be found than the equipment of its typewriting department. In schools of the highest efficiency L. C. SMITH BROS.' Typewriters predominate. They recognize that

"SILENT SMITH" Means Maximum Efficiency

Clatter and confusion are enemies of thought. The greater the racket the less the quantity and the poorer the quality of the work. Mechanical refinements have made the "Silent Smith" a marvel of quiet and efficiency.

Operators and employers alike know what a relief the "Silent Smith" is to the nerves-know, too, that its quiet, easy-running qualities mean the highest efficiency.
